BRIDE OF H. RYRIE WOODCeremony Takes Place at Home of Bride's Parents—Charity Bridge
Party for Sheltering Arms.

A color scheme of pink and green was carried out throughout the lower floor of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Gray Watson, 932 West Grace Street, for the marriage last evening of their daughter, Lillian E. Watson, to H. Ryrie Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Wood, of this city. The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock, the Rev. Samuel C. Hatcher, D. D., pastor of Centenary Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. Frank T. McFadden, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, officiating. Only the relatives of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends were present. An improvised altar of palms, bride roses and Cathedral candles was arranged in the drawing room, and the mantels were banked with southern smilax, ferns and Killarney roses. American Beauty roses and palms were used in the dining-room and hall, and the stairway was hung with smilax. The bride's wedding dress was of white satin trimmed in tulle and princess lace, with a cape and jacket of tulle and lace. The long court train was of satin, and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her veil of illusion was arranged in a cap and fastened with orange blossoms. Mr. Watson gave his daughter in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Gordon Fraser Wood, who was best man. Miss Hazeline Hildrey Watson, who attended her sister as maid of honor, wore pink chamois made with a tulle of pink tulle and trimmed with pink roses. She carried an armful of Killarney roses tied with streamers of pink gauze. Little Katherine Jean Wood and Mary Katherine Whitte, who held the ribbons, wore frocks of white mull and lace with white sashes.

A reception for the bridal party and those witnessing the ceremony was held after which Mr. and Mrs. Wood left for a wedding journey, which will include Toronto, Canada; Michigan, New York and other places of interest. Some of the guests from a distance attending the ceremony were Miss Margaret Robinson, 42 Lexington; Margaret and Julia Lee, of Baltimore; Kilbourn Barrett, of Lynchburg, and Mrs. Harry Ryrie Wood, of Toronto, Canada. The bride is a lovely girl, and has been very popular in society here since her debut two seasons ago, and her wedding, although a very quiet home affair, is of much interest to society here and throughout the State.

Announcement has just been made by the Belle R. Harrison Memorial Circle of Kings Daughters of their annual charity bridge party, which is to take place this season on Wednesday afternoon, November 11, at 3:30 o'clock, at the Country Club of Virginia. WOMEN'S MEETINGS.
The Confederate Memorial Literary Society will meet this morning at 11 o'clock in the Confederate Museum.

A Study in Colors
BY LILLIAN RUSSELL.

Few women are color-blind. They are practically all endowed with a sense of discernment which can be applied to the selection of proper color effects. Regardless of the passing fads and fancies, the application of this sense is always necessary to good taste.

It is woman's hand that paints the world. Man may do the rougher work, but woman uses the brush in the finishing touches.

In the costume of a race she is given the brighter and more varied colors. In the furnishing of a home it is the woman who decides the color combinations. It is her eternal vigilance against discordant colors that has developed her keen sense of discernment.

The wise woman naturally surrounds herself with the colors most becoming to her. The color of the hair and eyes and the nature of her complexion will govern her in selecting costumes and hats, and even the simplest article that adorns her person.

It is impossible for woman to change the color of her eyes. It is dangerous to attempt to change the color of her hair. But woman has the power to do with the coloring of her cheeks and lip and skin of her neck and hand. This is the avenue through which she can increase the number of colors that will be becoming to her.

Few colors fit a pallid face. A limited number will fail to draw special attention to the parchment cheek and wrinkled brow.

The woman who, through right living, plenty of exercise and fresh air, develops and keeps her natural coloring, has the largest and best selection of colors at her command.

Remember: We cannot select our hair and eyes, but we may put the color of health in our cheeks and lips.

Lillian Russell's Answers.
A. B. C.: When the bones are large there is nothing you can do to make them smaller. You can, however, cover up this defect by making your hands more plump. To do this, massage with cocoa butter or a good skin food. First scrub your hands with hot water, and good soap, and a nail brush; soak the hands in warm water for a few minutes, to soften them, then rub the cocoa butter well into the hands. Allow a portion of it to remain on overnight, covering the hands with gloves. The cocoa butter will nourish the skin.

Mrs. F. H. J.: One of the most common errors with the woman who seeks beauty is the frequency with which she tries one new cosmetic after another without studying more carefully the details of application of the familiar remedies at hand. It must not be forgotten, however, that each individual skin is different, and what will give prompt relief in one case will not do so in another. A clear, lovely complexion can only be acquired where fundamental principles of correct living and the general care of the complexion are observed.

E. T.: Thick lips often come from mouth breathing or biting the lips. If you do either of these, use a little willow bark and brush yourself of the habit. Biting the lips not only thickens them, but ruins the texture, making them rough and cracked. Hold the lips firmly and cultivate a decision of character. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you a formula for reducing the lips which may help you.

June: I feel sure if you are persistent you can soon rid yourself of the tiny wrinkles about your eyes. Rub your eyes with a good skin food will help you. Tincture of benzoin is whitening to the skin, but it is not so good for it is drying and in time will cause tiny wrinkles to form.

Dr. Brady's Health Talks
TAPEWORMS.

Tapeworms gain entrance into the intestinal canal through the ingestion of food. There are three common kinds of tapeworm—taenia solium, or pork tapeworm; taenia saginata, or beef tapeworm, and bothriocephalus latius, or the Russian fish tapeworm.

The commonest kind of tapeworm infection in America is that from beef. Tapeworms vary from a few feet to forty to fifty feet in length. They consist of a long chain of flat, flattened segments, each about an inch wide, narrowing in width and length toward the head, which is the smallest part, perhaps one-fourth of an inch wide. The worm attaches itself to the intestinal wall by means of hooks on the head. A chain of segments many feet in length is often passed from the host without the head, and as long lead remains, new segments grow from it.

A single segment is from one-half to three-fourths of an inch broad and twice as long. It cannot possibly be confused with anything else, such as seeds.

The Symptoms.
Many healthy persons harbor tapeworms without experiencing any effects. You may sometimes have them. Irregular abdominal pains, diarrhoeal attacks without apparent cause, sometimes marked anorexia, and perhaps a very ravenous appetite in a person who remains spare and gaunt, are observed in some cases. When a patient knows he has a tapeworm he is apt to have nervous, hypochondriacal, hysterical or psychical symptoms.

Of course, these are by no means positive signs of tapeworm. The only positive proof of tapeworm infection is the discovery of segments in the excreta or the eggs of the worm may be found by microscopic examination. One very suggestive sign is the preponderance of "cosmopolites"—white blood corpuscles taking root in the standard blood examination.

Treatment.
There is a great deal of bunk about the treatment of tapeworm infection. "Monsters," the fake specialist knows. The fact is, tapeworm is a very tractable, docile monster indeed.

First, prevention. All tapeworm segments are found in the excreta, and are often found in the soil. Because animals become infected from polluted ground, and the human stage of development completes the life cycle of the parasite, we need a careful inspection of beef and pork at slaughter-houses. Finally, never take a chance on rare or raw beef or pork unless you are sure it is not infected.

Second, how to get rid of the tapeworm head. The host must fast for three days, eat only the most digestible and only such food as scraped apple, sugar, white of egg, and soda crackers. He should have a thorough catharsis by the use of a laxative. Finally, never take a chance on rare or raw beef or pork unless you are sure it is not infected.

Questions and Answers.
O. E. writes: I am twenty-six years old and have had a tapeworm since childhood. There is no cough with it and it only bothers me in real weather. I have tried rubbing on the chest makes the place red, also have nasal catharsis. What would you advise me to do?

Reply: Have your catarrh treated by a man who specializes on the nose and throat. The skin trouble will probably clear up as the catarrh improves.

Prospector writes: Since hot weather arrived I have lived on a diet of cold water and bologna sausage. I lately have suffered considerably with my skin itching. Would the diet cause it?

Reply: Probably not. However, you ought to add fresh fruit or fresh vegetables to the diet.
